A system for identifying, defining, and classifying vocational and technical education instructional programs offered by state and local school systems is outlined. The system consists of two main parts: Part I, Instructional Programs Related to Occupations, summarizes instructional programs and lists corresponding codes, titles, and worker trait groups in the "Dictionary of Occupational Titles (DOT), Third Edition." The instructional programs are included in the "Standard Terminology for Curriculum and Instruction in Local and State School Systems." Part II, Occupations Related to Instructional Programs, lists DOT codes, titles, and worker trait groups with corresponding codes and titles in the U.S. Office of Education Classification System for vocational and technical education programs. FOREWORD

Recent years have evidenced the realization that a strong relationship exists between the world of education and the world of work. The knowledges, skills, and adaptability acquired in even the most general and humanistic forms of learning contribute to economic, social, and technological progress. At the same time the man who learns a trade or other occupational skill is acquiring a background that enables him to participate more fully in the obligations of citizenship and to lead a more complete and enjoyable life.

The Vocational Education Amendments of 1968 and other education-manpower legislation have pointed out the need for strengthening and extending occupational education opportunities to all segments of the population to assist individuals in preparing for living in an increasingly technical and complex society.

The joint education and manpower responsibilities of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Department of Labor involve many common goals. One such goal is the preparation of people for success in various occupations. There has been a need for a common occupational language that would aid the cooperative efforts of both Departments in relating education and the world of work. This document links vocational-technical education programs and occupations, and will provide a means for evaluating, comparing, and improving the results of occupational education. The publication has implications for designing curriculum content and planning education facilities in relation to labor market needs in various occupations, for summarizing information on occupational manpower resources and requirements, as well as for guidance and counseling of youth and adults in making appropriate career and vocational choices. By facilitating more efficient planning this publication should make possible more realistic matching of educational output with occupational requirements.

Occupational education is one of our major strategies in achieving a more effective utilization of our human resources. The task ahead is to help youth qualify for job opportunities and to provide the means for workers to keep up with changes through retraining and updating of skills.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This publication was made possible through the joint efforts of the Division of Vocational and Technical Education, Bureau of Adult, Vocational, and Library Programs, U.S. Office of Education, and the Branch of Occupational Analysis, U.S. Training and Employment Service, Manpower Administration. Emanuel Weinstein of the Office of Education, Division of Vocational and Technical Education, supervised its preparation. Other major contributors to this volume from the U.S. Office of Education were W. Dale Chismore of the National Center for Educational Statistics and members of the Division of Vocational and Technical Education.

Leon P. Minear is Director of the Division of Vocational and Technical Education and Dorothy M. Gilford is Assistant Commissioner for Educational Statistics.

At the U.S. Training and Employment Service, the principal contributions were made by Arden Nelsen, James E. Kelly, Susan Raleigh, and David Newton under the direction of Leon Lewis, Chief of the Branch of Occupational Analysis, and Carl A. Heinz, Chief of the Division of Occupational Analysis and Career Information. Norman Huth of the Wisconsin State Employment Service also made a significant contribution through a project on occupational information, sponsored by the Manpower Administration's Office of Manpower Research.

INTRODUCTION

The Vocational Education Act of 1963 as amended by the Vocational Education Amendments of 1968 reflects the dual emphasis of the Nation's manpower policy. This policy is designed to facilitate: (1) the preparation of a qualified, well trained labor force necessary for economic growth, and (2) the development of the individual's capabilities so that he may benefit from, participate in, and adjust to changes in the world of work.

This legislation indicates that vocational-technical education programs are intended for "persons of all ages in all communities," and those courses offered under such programs must be "realistic in the light of actual and anticipated opportunities for gainful employment and must be suited to their needs, interests, and abilities to benefit from such training."

The legislation also provides that vocational-technical education include within its scope all occupations which are not generally considered professional and do not require a baccalaureate or higher degree. The challenge to vocational educators and manpower analysts becomes quite obvious in planning for, and gaging the effectiveness of, the vocational-technical education programs in relation to the manpower and occupational demands of the economy.

To help meet this challenge, the Division of Vocational and Technical Education has been working closely with the National Center for Educational Statistics and with the Manpower Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, in drafting this document. It outlines a system which identifies, defines, and classifies vocational and technical instructional programs offered by State and local school systems, and links the programs to a wide range of occupations found in all areas of our economy. This document will aid those concerned with educational planning for manpower needs to measure more accurately the extent of such needs and the potential contribution of vocational education to the supply of manpower in this country.

In planning educational programs for manpower needs, there are three basic factors to be kept in mind:

1. the occupational distribution of the labor force, and projected trends in employment by occupation;

2. the actual work performed and the performance requirements for each occupation; and

3. the education and training needed by the worker for successful performance in those occupations.

Available labor force data and job information are not now fully adequate for education planners, but the techniques for obtaining better data are constantly being improved. Good sound data about the relationship of the learning force to the world of work are lacking. This document will provide a means for obtaining the missing data.

The document consists of two main parts: Part I, Instructional Programs Related to Occupations, and Part II, Occupations Related to Instructional Programs. Part I contains a list summarizing and coding the substantive content of defined vocational-technical education programs which are included in the Standard Terminology for Curriculum and Instruction in Local and State School Systems,[1] related to codes, titles, and worker trait groups in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles, Third Edition.[2] Part II contains a list which shows the Dictionary codes, titles, and worker trait groups related to codes and titles of vocational-technical education programs.

1. The Office of Education Classification System 3/

Accurate and comparable information about vocational-technical instructional programs offered in public schools in the United States and its Territories is essential for realistic planning, efficient operation, and meaningful evaluation of such programs by State and local school system. Such information can result in improved decision-making in areas such as administration, guidance, curriculum development, and instruction.

The differences in instructional program offerings among local school systems have long called for some method for providing a standardized means of analyzing variations in curriculum content. The codes and definitions for the instructional programs contained in this document should provide a uniform basis for collecting, recording, interpreting, and transmitting meaningful data about enrollments, graduates, placements, and other significant items at the local, State, and national levels.

The classification system is intended to assist local State education agencies in identifying, classifying, and describing items of information about subject matter and curriculum activities. Seven major vocational-technical areas have been identified and coded as follows:

01 Agricultural	09 Home Economics
04 Distributive Education	14 Office Occupations
07 Health Occupations Education	16 Technical Education

17 Trade and Industrial Occupations

The selection of the vocational-technical education areas, including the subject-matter in them, was determined by (1) an extensive study of record and report forms of local school systems and State education agencies, (2) an extensive review of a wide range of professional literature concerned with subject-matter areas and cocurricular activities, and (3) conferences with numerous persons in State education agencies, local school systems, colleges and universities, and the U.S. Office of Education.

3/The system described here is contained in Handbook VI, Standard Terminology for Curriculum and Instruction in Local and State School Systems which identifies, classifies, and describes a broad spectrum of subject-matter areas and activities offered in elementary, secondary, junior college, and adult education programs.

The coding system is intended to provide a distinct identity for each educational program area and for each of the classified items of information within it. The code numbers appearing at the left of the items of information in Part I are for identification purposes. Many of the items are refined to include one or more related subitems of information. The identification codes may be used with appropriate modifications in the collection, storage, retrieval, and transmission of information about subject-matter and may be used by local and State school systems for both manual and machine methods of data processing. Although the standard terminology handbook contains 10-digit codes for many instructional programs, the codes used in this document, with some exceptions, have been limited to 6-digits because it was felt that this level of specificity would be sufficiently useful at this time. In a few cases, 8-digit codes are used where it is felt that specific data were needed for certain programs. The interpretation of the code is as follows:

First 2-digit position: subject matter area
Example: 14 OFFICE OCCUPATIONS

Second 2-digit position: principal segment of subject matter
Example: 14.02 BUSINESS DATA PROCESSING SYSTEMS OCCUPATIONS

Third 2-digit position: division of principal segment
Example: 14.0202 PERIPHERAL EQUIPMENT OPERATORS

Fourth 2-digit position: first-level detail of division of principal segment
Example: 14.020201 KEY PUNCH AND CODING EQUIPMENT OPERATORS

The standardized terminology presented in this document offers the following advantages:

- a sounder basis for describing and evaluating administrative, organizational, and teaching practices;
- a greater quantity of significant information to guide local, State, and national authorities in determining vocational-technical educational needs and policies;
- easier and more reliable reporting on the condition and progress of vocational-technical education;
- ease in utilizing local administrative information in reports to State agencies (facilitated by the use of electronic data processing equipment);

- greater consistency in the kinds of information accompanying pupils who transfer from one school or school system to another, or from a secondary school to a college;

- more favorable conditions for research and use of research data;

- greater comparability of information about instructional programs within the various communities and States; and

- greater accuracy in the summaries of information compiled by local, State, and national offices.

2. The DICTIONARY OF OCCUPATIONAL TITLES Classification and Code

There are nearly 22,000 occupations defined in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles. Each occupation is incorporated into a classification structure [4] in which jobs are given 6-digit code numbers (e.g., 201.368) to reflect the kind and level of work performed. The code numbers are used by the various State employment services for identifying and classifying applicants and job openings, and for selection, statistical reporting, and other operating purposes.[5]

(1) The Occupational Group Arrangement. In this arrangement the jobs are grouped according to some combination of work field, purpose, material, product, service, subject matter, generic term, and/or industry, as reflected in the first 3 digits of the code number. This arrangement groups jobs into nine broad categories:

0) Professional, technical, and managerial occupations
1)
2 Clerical and sales occupations
3 Service occupations
4 Farming, fishery, forestry, and related occupations
5 Processing occupations
6 Machines trades occupations
7 Benchwork occupations
8 Structural work occupations
9 Miscellaneous occupations

[4] For a detailed explanation of the classification structure, see pp. xxi-xx of the Introduction of Volume I of the Dictionary of Occupational Titles, Third Edition.

[5] A 3-digit suffix code system has been developed for statistical reporting and other manpower program purposes requiring unique code numbers to identify specific jobs. Suffix codes have been published by the U.S. Department of Labor for all defined job titles in the separate volume Suffix Codes for Jobs Defined in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles, Third Edition, released in February 1967. The 9-digit codes accompany the Dictionary job titles in this publication include the suffix codes.

The categories are divided into 84 2-digit divisions, and the divisions, in turn, are divided into 603 separate 3-digit groups.[6] These are reflected in the first, second, and third digits of the code number, respectively. For example, the first three digits (201.) of the code for SECRETARY derive as follows:

First digit position: Category 2 (Clerical and Sales Occupations)

Second digit position: Division 20 (Stenography, Typing, Filing, and Related Occupations)

Third digit position: Group 201. (Secretaries)

The fourth, fifth, and sixth digits of the code number are based on the following findings of U.S. Training and Employment Service research:

1. Every job requires the worker to function in some degree in relation to Data, People, and Things.

2. The relationships specific to Data, People, and Things can be arranged in each case from the simple to the complex in a hierarchy so that, generally, each successive function can include the simpler ones and exclude the more complex functions.

3. It is possible to express a job's relationship to Data, People, and Things by identifying the highest appropriate function in each hierarchy to which the job requires the worker to have a significant relationship.

[6] Definitions of each of the categories, divisions, and groups appear in Volume II of the Dictionary in the section titles "Occupational Group Arrangement of Titles and Codes," beginning on p. 33.

4. Together, the last three digits of the code number can express the total level of complexity at which the job requires the worker to function. 7/

The worker function relationships within the Data, People, and Things hierarchies are as follows:

	Data	People	Things
0	Synthesizing	Mentoring	Setting-up
1	Coordinating	Negotiating	Precision Working
2	Analyzing	Instructing	Operating-Controlling
3	Compiling	Supervising	Driving-Operating
4	Computing	Diverting	Manipulating
5	Copying	Persuading	Tending
6	Comparing	Speaking-Signaling	Feeding-Offbearing
7)	No significant	Serving	Handling
8)	relationship 8/	No significant relationship 8/	No significant relationship 8/

For example, the fourth, fifth, and sixth digits (.368) of the code for SECRETARY derive as follows:

Fourth digit position: The worker function Compiling (3) in the Data hierarchy.

Fifth digit position: The worker function Speaking-Signaling (6) in the People Hierarchy.

Sixth digit position: The indication of No significant relationship (8) in the Things hierarchy.

(2) The Worker Traits Arrangement. Those abilities, personal traits, and characteristics required of an individual to achieve average successful job performance are identified in the Dictionary as worker traits. In the Worker Traits Arrangement jobs are grouped according to some combination of required worker trait components: i.e., general educational development, specific vocational preparation, 9/ aptitudes, interests, temperaments, and physical demands. The Worker Traits Arrangement of Titles and Codes is organized into 22 broad areas of work.

7/ The relationships of worker functions within the Date, People, and Things hierarchies are explained and defined more fully on pp. 649 and 650 in Appendix A in Volume II of the Dictionary.

8/ The numeral 8 signifies that the relationship which the job requires of the worker is not significant within a particular hierarchy. The digit 7 is used in the Data hierarchy instead of the digit 8 whenever a worker's involvement in the Things hierarchy is at the 0, 1, or 2 level and there is no significant relationship to Data.

9/ General educational development and specific vocational preparation together are identified as training time.

These areas reflect 114 specific worker trait groups 10/ described by narrative information under four headings:

Work Performed
Worker Requirements
Clues for Relating Applicants and Requirements
Training and methods of Entry

The narrative information is followed by a section entitled Related Classifications (a list of other worker trait groups that have something in common with this group); and a Qualifications Profile that indicates the range of worker traits ratings pertinent to jobs within that group. For example, the job of SECRETARY is found in the worker trait group Secretarial and Related Work (page 263, volume II), which is in the area of work CLERICAL WORK.

Supplemental to the classification arrangements are 229 industry designations. 11/ Each job title defined in the Dictionary is assigned one or more industry designations to indicate the type of economic activity with which the job is usually associated. The designations also serve to differentiate among identical titles in different types of activities.

10/ The Worker Trait Groups are presented in Volume II of the Dictionary in the section titled "Worker Traits Arrangement of Titles and Codes," beginning on page 225.

11/ A detailed explanation of industry designations is presented in the introduction to Volume I of the Dictionary, page xvi. The index of industry designations, complete industry titles and definitions, and an alphabetical list of occupational titles in each industry may be found in Volume II of the Dictionary in that section titles "Industry Arrangement of Titles," beginning on page 531.

HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

This document is intended primarily as a tool to assist the State Board for Vocational Education in completing certain sections of the State Plans. It is intended also as an aid to State employment services and other manpower agencies in describing job market information in terms of educational programs for use by vocational educators in planning their programs. The document will also provide counseling and guidance personnel with realistic information concerning the relationships between vocational education programs and occupations.

Part I of this document is a six-column listing of coded and defined vocational-technical education instructional programs related to codes, titles, and worker trait groups in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles. Instructional programs offered in the seven recognized vocational education areas have been identified, classified, and defined. Generally, the descriptions of the instructional programs represent composites of subject matter, and it is conceivable that a student will have to take courses in other areas in vocational and general education to round out his training. In addition, it should be noted that the programs are not associated with any particular level of education, e.g., secondary, adult, but rather are general descriptions which are intended to be related to one or more levels when data are gathered about them.

In cases where a program may be offered by one area but from a generic viewpoint classified in another, the code of the latter should be used. For example, although a practical nursing program may be included in Trade and Industrial education the code for such a program would be taken from the Health Occupations Education area, i.e., 07.0205.

In some instances it has been necessary to interrelate programs by means of certain cross-reference phrases. These are as follows:

"See" - An item followed by ("See...") has been absorbed into the item to which cross-reference is made. When reporting such a program, the code of the second item should be used.

Example: 01.0103 FARM MECHANICS -- (See the category 01.03 AGRICULTURAL MECHANICS.)

01.03 AGRICULTURAL MECHANICS--A combination of subject matter and activities designed to develop abilities necessary for assisting with and/or performing the common and important operations or processes involved in the selection, operation, maintenance, and use of agricultural power, agricultural machinery and equipment, structures and utilities, soil and water management, and agricultural mechanics shop, including kindred sales and services.

"See also" - An item followed by ("See also...") also is defined, with some modification for a particular application, in the area to which the cross-reference is made. The code which is assigned should be the one that is most pertinent to the program to be reported.

Example: 14.0701 EXECUTIVE SECRETARY -- Programs concerned with secretarial coordinating, expediting, and facilitating functions of the office for aiding the executive under his direction and in a confidential relationship. (See also 14.0801 Administrative Assistant under Supervisory and Administrative Management Occupations.)

14.0801 ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT -- Programs concerned with the coordinating, expediting, and facilitating functions of the office for aiding the executive, under his direction and in a confidential relationship, in the discharge of his duties as related to personnel, the budget, records control, housekeeping, making studies, conducting analyses, reviewing reports, and other responsibilities.

"For definition see" - An item followed by ("For definition see...") indicates that the definition which occurs in one place is applicable in both programs. The code assigned depends on the area in which it is offered.

Example: 01.0701 FORESTS -- (For definition see 01.0601 FORESTS under AGRICULTURAL RESOURCES.)

01.0601 FORESTS -- A combination of subject matter and experiences concerned with forests as living communities of plants and animals in which trees are the dominant species. Emphasis is on the multiple use of forest land and resources.

"Included as"- An item followed by ("Included as ...") contains a general description for an area which also is listed under TECHNICAL EDUCATION. This code should be assigned if the program is not at the technical level.

Example: 07.0203 MEDICAL LABORATORY ASSISTING -- A combination of subject matter and experiences organized ro prepare a person to work under the supervision of medical technologists, clinical pathologists, or physicians to perform routine clinical laboratory procedures)

(Included as 16.0303 MEDICAL LABORATORY ASSISTING under TECHNICAL EDUCATION.)
07.0203 MEDICAL LABORATORY ASSISTING -- (For description see 07.0203 MEDICAL LABORATORY ASSISTING under HEALTH OCCUPATIONS EDUCATION.)

"For description see" - An item followed by ("For description see...") appears only under TECHNICAL EDUCATION and indicates that the item referred to includes a description of the nature of the content of the program. This code should be assigned if the program is at the technical level.

Example: 16.0302 ELECTROENCEPHALOGRAPH TECHNICIAN-- (For description see 07.0901 ELECTROENCEPHALOGRAPH TECHNICIAN under HEALTH OCCUPATIONS EDUCATION.)

07.0901 ELECTROENCEPHALOGRAPH TECHNICIAN -- A combination of subject matter and experiences designed to prepare a person to operate, maintain, and repair mechanical, electrical, and electronic equipment and instruments which are in use in medical practice. (Included as 16.0302 ELECTROENCEPHALOGRAPH TECHNICIAN under TECHNICAL EDUCATION.)

The code is a flexible one ranging from the very broad subject matter areas to very specific programs. Each succeeding level of specificity may be considered to be subsumed in the previous one. However, the 4-digit group may serve (1) to designate programs which are combinations of specialized programs such as those indicated under it in the classification system, e.g., 17.02 Appliances Repair; or (2) to provide a means for summarizing data for an entire group, e.g., 14.02 Business Data Processing Systems Occupations. In assigning a code, the most specific code that is applicable should be used.

The code numbers ending in "99" at the end of each subject matter area are intended for the designation of any instructional programs being offered that are not identifiable in any of the subject matter segments. When using this code to report programs, the title of the specific program being offered should be noted. If possible any specific Dictionary code or codes associated with it should be noted. The occupations which are shown with these groups are indicators of occupations held by persons completing programs which are not classified or defined. At the present time, information about such programs is scarce. Specific programs frequently identified by code 99 may form the basis for the establishment of new subject matter segments. Any supplemental information such as curriculum materials or job descriptions would be welcome.

The list of occupations is not complete but is illustrative of the occupations associated with the educational programs. The selection of occupations shown is based largely on the experiences of vocational-technical educators.

In some instances, the same occupation was related to more than one subject matter area, e.g. Distributive Education and Office Occupations. Such occupations have been listed in the area which contributes the major or critical competencies needed to perform the job. Office of Education codes should be assigned which are shown as identified with the occupation.

The occupational titles of supervisors and foremen are listed with the educational programs with which they are associated, e.g., Foreman, Printing Shop is listed with 17.19 Graphic Arts Occupations; Supervisor, Computer Operations with 14.0201 Computer and Console Operators. However, specific instructional programs of a broad nature concerned with training and retraining administrative and supervisory personnel have been identified and classified. These should be reported when applicable, e.g. 01.0104 Farm Business Management; 17.17 Foremanship, Supervision and Management Development.

In order to conserve space, titles of undefined related occupations in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles that could be related to the educational programs have been omitted. However, in a few instances where no relationship of an educational program to a main or a defined related title could have been indicated, the undefined related titles have been used, e.g., Orthotist (078.368-026) to Orthotics (07.0404); Prosthetist (078.368-026) to Prosthetics (07.0403). Both Orthotist and Prosthetist have the same Dictionary code because undefined related titles were not assigned separate 9-digit codes in the Dictionary classification system, but take the codes of the occupational titles to which they are attached.

In some instances no occupations are contained in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles, Third Edition, that could be related to the instructional programs, and therefore, the columns intended for the entry of Dictionary information are blank.

Part II of this document provides convertibility from specific Dictionary titles and codes to the corresponding vocational education instructional programs. The 9-digit codes are listed in the left hand column in numerical order followed by the job titles, industry designations, and worker trait group page numbers. The corresponding instructional program code numbers and titles are listed in the right hand columns.

This section of the document will assist U.S. Department of Labor and State employment service personnel in meeting their responsibilities under the Vocational Education Act of 1963 and the Vocational Education Amendments of 1968. Under this legislation the U.S. Department of Labor, through the State public employment security agencies, is responsible for providing current labor market information to the State and local vocational education agencies to enable more effective planning of vocational education programs and program content in meeting current manpower needs. Such labor market information is developed at State and local levels in terms of the job titles and codes in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles. Part II provides the means for improving the usefulness of those data in program planning by showing the specific vocational education programs that relate to the Dictionary code numbers and job titles used by State employment services in compiling information on current and projected employment.

This section will be useful to others who utilize data derived from the Dictionary of Occupational Titles, Third Edition. For example, it is desirable to identify pertinent training programs or courses that provide training for occupations for which there are realistic job openings and opportunities. After locating the occupational code and title one can readily obtain the code and title of the corresponding instructional program. A labor market survey may show current job openings and a future demand for BOOKKEEPING-MACHINE OPERATORS (clerical) I 215.388-010. Using Part II of this document the user would find that instructional program 14.0104 MACHINE OPERATORS (BILLING, BOOKKEEPING, AND ACCOUNTING) provides the subject matter and experiences to prepare persons to become BOOKKEEPING-MACHINE OPERATORS I.

This document also is useful in guidance and counseling activities either in identifying jobs for which a completed vocational education program has prepared a person or in determining the vocational education courses that a person should consider in preparing himself for meaningful job opportunities. In developing a sound vocational plan for a counselee, the counselor, after assisting him in selecting occupations for which he is potentially suited, would use Part II to determine the instructional programs that relate to those occupations.

The worker trait groups can provide clues to instructional programs for Dictionary codes and job titles that are not listed in this document. The user interested in such a job should first locate the worker trait group in volume II that lists the job in question. Other jobs in the same worker trait group will have similar worker requirements and training and methods of entry. Those jobs with the same 6-digit code as the job in question have the closest relationship in terms of job knowledge and job duties and should be considered first in identifying instructional programs.

For example: Of the eight titles of jobs concerned with the fabrication of eyeglass lens, having the Dictionary code 711.884 only LENS POLISHER (optical goods) 711.884-026 is listed in this document as relating to an instructional program. An examination of the definitions in volume I of the Dictionary will reveal that all eight jobs have similar duties concerned with lens grinding and polishing. All are listed in volume II under the worker trait group "Manipulating," an indication that training and methods of entry and worker requirements are similar. Using this approach the user will arrive at the decision that instructional program 17.2101 INSTRUMENTS (OTHER THAN WATCHES AND CLOCKS) will provide the needed training not only for LENS POLISHER, but for the other lens grinding and polishing jobs with Dictionary code 711.884.

INSTRUCTIONAL PROGRAMS AND OCCUPATIONS

Part I. Instructional Programs Related to Occupations

AGRICULTURE

01.00 00 00

Agriculture is comprised of the group of related courses or units of subject matter which are organized for carrying on learning experiences concerned with preparation for or upgrading in occupations requiring knowledge and skills in agricultural subjects. The functions of agricultural production, agricultural supplies, agricultural mechanization, agricultural products (processing), ornamental horticulture, forestry, agricultural resources, and the services related thereto, are emphasized in the instruction designed to provide opportunities for pupils to prepare for or improve their competencies in agricultural occupations. An agricultural occupation may include one or any combination of these functions.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Agriculture applied the following rationale to the selection of the items for placement in the Agriculture subject-matter area: 1) the items were determined by consensus of the committee to be appropriate to agriculture; 2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and 3) the various items classified under Agriculture were identifiable by titles, which the ad hoc committee considered to be most commonly used in Agriculture.

Future Farmers of America (FFA) Chapters and related leadership training and supervised occupational experience programs are significant integral activities which aid agricultural education in making contributions to the guidance and total general educational development of pupils. The Future Farmers of America and related leadership training permeate every aspect of the instructional program in agriculture. The foundation upon which the FFA is built includes leadership and character development, sportsmanship, cooperation, service, thrift, scholarship, improved agriculture, organized recreation, citizenship, and patriotism. (For a more detailed treatment of the aims and purposes of FFA see Official Manual of Future Farmers of America.)[1/]

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION

04.00 00 00

Distributive Education includes various combinations of subject matter and learning experiences related to the performance of activities that direct the flow of goods and services, including their appropriate utilization, from the producer to the consumer or user. These activities include selling, and such sales-supporting functions as buying, transporting, storing, promoting, financing, marketing research and management.

Distributive education is comprised of programs of occupational instruction in the field of distribution and marketing. These programs are designed to prepare individuals to enter, or progress or improve competencies in, distributive occupations. Emphasis is on the development of attitudes, skills and understanding related to marketing, merchandising, and management. Instruction is offered at the secondary, postsecondary, and adult education levels and is structured to meet the requirements for gainful employment and entrepreneurship at specified occupational levels. Distributive occupations are found in such areas of economic activity as retail and wholesale trade, finance, insurance, real estate, services and service trades, manufacturing, transportation, utilities, and communications.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Distributive Education applied the following rationale to the selection of the items for placement in the Distributive Education area: 1) the items were determined by consensus of the committee to the appropriate to Distributive Education in terms of recent vocational education legislation; 2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and 3) the various items classified under Distributive Education were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be most appropriate to Distributive Education.

Opportunities to develop leadership, social and civic awareness, and increased understanding of the world of work in distribution and marketing are provided through the Distributive Education Clubs of America, the youth organization for distributive education pupils. As an integral part of the instructional program, pupils engage in activities that extend their interests, skills, and knowledges in selected aspects of distribution and marketing. Such organized activities under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities.

HEALTH OCCUPATIONS EDUCATION

07.00 00 00

Education for health occupations comprises the body of related subject matter, or the body of related courses, and planned experiences designed to impart knowledge and develop understandings and skills required to support the health professions. Instruction is organized to prepare pupils for occupational objectives concerned with assisting qualified personnel in providing diagnostic, therapeutic, preventive, restorative, and rehabilitative services to people, including understandings and skills essential to provide care and health services to patients.

Education for health workers usually is conducted by recognized education agencies and appropriate health institutions and services that can make available the quality and kind of experiences needed by the trainee in developing the competencies required for his occupational goal.

Instructional programs which prepare persons for occupations that render health services directly to patients provide planned instruction and experience in appropriate clinical situations. For occupations that render health services which do not involve direct services to patients, planned instruction and experience in laboratories and/or appropriate work situations are provided as an integral part of the instructional program.

Licensure, Certification, and Registration

Techniques for the regulation of workers in health occupations have been developed and administered, either by appropriate professional organizations or by legally constituted authority in the respective States, as a means to safeguarding the public against unqualified and/or unscrupulous persons. Therefore, regulatory procedures such as licensure, certification and/or registration in certain of the health occupations have been established.

Licensure-- Under the authority of a State, laws are enacted setting forth the minimum qualifications for persons and the standards to be met for practicing in an occupation. All physicians, nurses, dental hygienists, and a growing number of paramedical personnel representing these groups have sought and helped to establish State laws for licensing practitioners in their fields. They have also found that mandatory regulation of these occupations under State licensure laws best serves the public interest. Employers, too, have come to rely upon the legal licensing agency for assurance that a practitioner is qualified in his field.

Certification--Professional societies endeavor to improve the quality of services provided by supportive personnel in health fields through voluntary certification of individual workers. Standards pertaining to education, experience, and personal qualifications are determined by the professional society, usually in cooperation with the auxiliary group that is subject to the certification procedure. Applicants wishing to become certified under these standards must make application to the certifying board of the association and comply with the certification of standards.

Registration--The term registration is used by certain occupational groups interchangeably with either the term licensure or certification. "Registered" nurse connotes a nurse who is licensed to practice as a professional nurse or as a technical-level nurse. A "registered" medical librarian is certified by and registered with her professional association. Registration may be interpreted in specific instances by placing after it (l) when "licensure" applies or (c) when "certification" applies.

NOTE: In situations involving designation of "licensure," "certification," or "registration" for record and/or report purposes as applicable to selected items in this subject-matter area, the following symbols may be used: (L) for Licensure; (C) for Certification; and (R) for Registration.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Health Occupations Education applied the following rationale to the selection of substantive content for placement in Health Occupations Education area: (1) the items selected and classified were determined by consensus of the committee to be representative of the subject matter most commonly taught in health occupations education in the United States; (2) the various aspects of subject matter were identified by titles which were considered as being most commonly used; and (3) the various aspects of subject matter selected for placement under Health Occupations Education could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements.

Included under the heading, Health Occupations Education, are items of information which describe selected aspects of education for health occupations. In the following definitions the term "subject matter" includes theory that may be given either in a school or in a clinical setting, and the term "experiences" includes the applied subject matter which is provided in a clinical setting.

HOME ECONOMICS

09.00 00 00

Home economics comprises the group of related courses or units of instruction organized for purposes of enabling pupils to acquire knowledge and develop understanding, attitudes, and skills relevant to (a) personal, home, and family life, and (b) occupational preparation using the knowledge and skills of home economics. The subject matter of home economics includes, in addition to that which is unique to the area, concepts drawn from the natural and social sciences and the humanities.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Home Economics applied the following rationale to the selection of the items for placement in the Home Economics area: (1) the items were determined by consensus of the committee to be appropriate to home economics in terms of preparation for personal, home, and family living, and for occupational preparation; (2) the items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various items classified under Home Economics were identifiable by titles which were considered to be in current use in home economics.

Opportunities to develop leadership, social and civic awareness, and increased understanding of the world of work in home economics are provided through the Future Homemakers of America, a youth organization for home economics pupils. As an integral part of the instructional program, pupils in this organization engage in activities that extend their interests, skills, and knowledge in many aspects of home economics. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities.

OFFICE OCCUPATIONS

14.00 00 00 00

This body of subject matter, or combination of courses and practical experience, is organized into programs of instruction to provide opportunities for students to prepare for or advance in selected office occupations. In the instructional process various aspects of subject matter frequently are drawn from other subject-matter areas. Learning experiences are designed to lead to employment and/or advancement of individuals in occupations in public or private enterprises or organizations related to the facilitation function of the office. "Facilities function" as used here refers to the expediting role played by office occupations as the connecting link between the production and distribution activities of an organization. Included are a variety of activities, such as recording and retrieval of data, supervision and coordination of office activities, internal and external communication, and the reporting of information. In this area are the items of information which identify categories of career objectives in office occupations, and around which courses and practical experiences are developed.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Office Occupations applied the following criteria to the selection of substantive content for placement in the Office Occupations subject-matter area: 1) the content was determined by consensus of the committee to be unique and appropriate to Office Occupations in terms of the Vocational Education Act of 1963; 2) subject-matter items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and 3) the various aspects of organized subject matter classified under Office Occupations were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be most appropriate to office occupations.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular classtime for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of Office Occupations as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Office Education Association provides additional opportunities to develop leadership, other qualities, and an understanding of the worled of work in office occupations. Such organized activities under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. They may be designed for participation of pupils as individuals or in groups, and are an integral part of classwork.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION

16.00 00 00

Technical education is concerned with that body of knowledge organized in a planned sequence of classroom and laboratory experiences, usually at the postsecondary level, to prepare pupils for a cluster of job opportunities in a specialized field of technology. The program of instruction normally includes the study of the underlying sciences and supporting mathematics inherent in a technology, as well as methods, skills, materials, and processes commonly used and services performed in the technology. A planned sequence of study and extensive knowledge in a field of specialization is required in technical education, including competency in the basic communication skills and related general education. Technical education prepares for the occupational area between the skilled craftsman and the professional person such as the doctor, the engineer, and the scientist.

The technical education curriculum must be so structured that it prepares the graduate to enter a job and be productive with a minimum of additional training after employment, provides a background of knowledge and skills which will enable him to advance with the developments in the technology, and enables him, with a reasonable amount of experience and additional education, to advance into positions of increased responsibility.

The technician frequently is employed in direct support of the professional employee. For examply, the engineering technician will be capable of performing such duties as assisting in the following engineering functions: designing, developing, testing, modifying of products and processes, production planning, writing reports, and preparing estimates; analyzing and diagnosing technical problems that involve independent decisions; and solving a wide range of technical problems by applying his background in the technical specialties--science, mathematics, and communicative and citizenship skills.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Technical Education applied the following rationale to the selection of substantive content for placement in the Technical Education area: (1) the item selected and classified were determined as representing the subject matter most commonly taught in technical education in the United States; (2) the various aspects of subject matter were identified by titles which were considered as being most commonly used; and (3) the various aspects of subject matter selected for placement under Technical Education could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements.

16.01	ENGINEERING-RELATED TECHNOLOGY That part of the engineering field which requires the application of scientific and engineering knowledge and methods combined with technical skills necessary in the support of engineering activities. Persons prepared in this technology are a part of the engineering manpower team which includes the skilled craftsman, the technician, and the engineer, and work as technicians in close support of the engineer.
16.0101	AERONAUTICAL TECHNOLOGY A planned program of classroom and laboratory experiences, including mathematics, the physical sciences, and a combination of aerodynamics, structures, materials, and electronics as applied to the design, testing, and development of aircraft. This program is designed to produce the ability to understand the propulsion, control, and guidance system of the airplane, and to collect pertinent engineering data in a research-and-development activity. TRADE AND INDUSTRIAL OCCUPATIONS

17.00 00 00

Trade and industrial occupations is the branch of vocational education which is concerned with preparing persons for initial employment, or for upgrading or retraining workers in a wide range of trade and industrial occupations. Such occupations are skilled or semi-skilled and are concerned with layout designing, producing, processing, assembling, testing, maintaining, servicing, or repairing any product or commodity. Instruction is provided (1) in basic manipulative skills, safety judgment, and related occupational information in mathematics, drafting, and science required to perform successfully in the occupation, and (2) through a combination of shop or laboratory experiences simulating those found in industry and classroom learning. Included is instruction for apprentices in apprenticeable occupations or for journeymen already engaged in a trade or industrial occupation. Also included is training for service and certain semiprofessional occupations considered to be trade and industrial in nature.

The Ad Hoc Committee for Trade and Industrial Occupations applied the following criteria to the selection of substantive content for placement in the subject-matter area: (1) the content was determined by consensus of the committee to be unique and appropriate to trade and industrial occupations; (2) subject-matter items could be defined in brief form using only salient descriptive elements; and (3) the various aspects of organized subject matter were identifiable by titles which the ad hoc committee considered to be most appropriate to trade and industrial occupations.

Opportunities are frequently provided both during and outside regular class time for pupils to develop interests, skills, and knowledge in selected aspects of trade and industrial occupations as an integral part of the instructional program. As an example, the Vocational and Industrial Clubs of America provide additional opportunities to develop leadership, civic responsibilities, and other qualities, and an understanding of the world of work in trade and industrial occupations. Such organized activities, under appropriate supervision, are referred to as cocurricular activities. They may be designed for participation of pupils as individuals or in groups.

17.17	FOREMANSHIP, SUPERVISION AND MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT Planned learning experiences designed to assist the supervisor in effectively utilizing the men, machines, and materials under his supervision by broadening his background knowledge and developing his leadership abilities. Included is the study of human behavior; organization and management; oral communication; labor laws; personnel procedures; job analysis; work simplification; employee utilization; the development of writing techniques as applied to the preparation of letters, memos, and technical reports; speed reading; and safety and first-aid practices.		No D.O.T. relationship shown because this instructional program applies to the development of foremen and supervisors over a broad range of crafts, trades, and industrial functions. In most instances occupations require a combination of knowledge of supervision and knowledge of a craft, manufacturing process or operations of an industry. Classifications in the D.O.T. are made according to process involved, craft of workers supervised, product manufactured, or according to industry in which work occurs.
17.18	GENERAL CONTINUATION Part-time classes--for persons under 18 years of age who have left full-time instruction to enter the labor force--providing instruction designed primarily to increase civic intelligence rather than to develop specific occupational competence.		No D.O.T. relationship applies to this program.
17.19	GRAPHIC ARTS OCCUPATIONS Organized, specialized learning experiences which include theory, laboratory, and shopwork as they relate to all phases of hot and cold typesetting, layout, composition, presswork, and binding, including flexography, lithography, photoengraving, and other graphic arts related to the printing industry. Emphasis is on typographical layouts and design, hand and machine typesetting, camera and plate work, imposition, typecasting, offset and platen press makeup and operation, papercutting, ink and color preparation, binding, and production by silk screen process.	659.130-010	FOREMAN, PRINTING SHOP (print. & pub.)	299	Super. 17.2302	MACHINE SHOP Specialized classroom and shop experiences concerned with all aspects of shaping metal parts. Instruction involves making computations relating to work dimensions, tooling, feeds, and speeds of machining. Also emphasized are: work on the bench and on lathes, shapers, milling machines, grinders, and drills; uses of precision measuring instruments such as layout tools, micrometers, and gages; methods of machining and heat treatment of various metals; blueprint reading; and the layout of machine parts. Instruction prepares the pupil to operate and repair all machines.	600.131-010	MACHINE-SHOP FOREMAN, TOOL (mach. shop)	299	Super. Wk. (Farm., Mfg. etc.)
